Lighthouse International's Filomen M. D'Agostino Greenberg Music School also has a "tradition of producing full-staged one-act operas" - <http://lighthouse.org/services-and-assistance/music-school/>

Other New York City institutions have been producing and performing opera recently, including American Symphony Orchestra, Baroque Aria Ensemble, Collegiate Chorale, DiMenna Center, Harlem Stage, Jewish Theological Seminary, New York Fringe Festival, New York Philharmonic, Orchestra of St. Luke's, Park Avenue Armory, and Talea Ensemble.

Then there's Washington, D.C.-based Opera Lafayette - <http://www.operalafayette.org/> - which lists more reviews of its New York City performances on its web site than it does its Washington performances (by a ratio of 5:1): <http://www.operalafayette.org/reviews>. If you want to go beyond the confines of the five boroughs, there are also Opera New Jersey, New Jersey State Opera, New Jersey Association of Verismo Opera, etc. Some out-of-town opera producers (Bard, Caramoor, Peak Performances) provide dedicated bus transportation from New York City.
